CONTRACT FOR ROCMAC ROAD HELD TO BE VOID

BIDDERS FAILED TO CERTIFY PERSONNEL OF PARTNERSHIP.

RULINGS FOR BOTH SIDES

[Special to The Indianapolis News]

ANDERSON, Ind., August 15.—Judge Luther F. Pence, in the Madison superior court today found for the plaintiffs, W. R. Jones and other taxpayers of Monroe township, for an injunction against the board of commissioners of Madison county, enjoining the board from carrying out a contract for paving two roads with a patented material known as Rocmac because the court ruled, the contractors for the roads concerned, J. D. Rason & Co., had not qualified by filing in the county clerk's office the names of members of the firm of partnership. For that reason Judge Pence held the contracts were invalid. Other injunctive relief prayed by the plaintiffs was denied by the court.

Appeal is Taken.

An appeal to the supreme court of Indiana was granted, with Samuel G. Phillips, banker of Alexandria, and one of the governors of the Hoosier Dixie Highways Association, as surety to the appeal bond.

As the finding of the court was construed by some lawyers to mean that the recent contracts were invalidated only by failure of the successful bidder to certify the personnel of the partnership, they think the commissioners will readvertise for bids, and let contracts according to the specifications followed in the contract set aside today. In the meantime the county treasurer, George T. Beebe, said he would await further action by the commissioners before accepting bids for the road bonds for $169,000.

One of the contentions in the petition for an injunction today was that specifications calling for the use of Rocmac were illegal, because it was charged Rocmac is patented and copyrighted, and is controlled in such manner as to create a monopoly for Rocmac makers. On that point the finding of the court was for the defendants, and thereby a victory for the Rocmac manufacturers. Judge Pence held that the use of a patented or copyrighted material in the construction of public improvements is condemned only when the patentee demands an unreasonable and arbitrary price for material, and withholds the sale thereof from the general public, thus preventing fair competition between bidders for the work.

Should Have Required Agreement.

The court also ruled that the commissioners before establishing Rocmac roads in the controversy should have required an agreement by the patentee of the material to sell its product to all persons and bidders at the same price and at fair and reasonable prices, but that the board's failure to do so was a mere irregularity of procedure and did not render its judgment void.

Judge Pence further said that the plaintiffs had the statutory right of appeal from the judgment of the board ordering the construction of the roads in controversy and having failed to avail themselves of such a right they are not entitled to the injunctive relief sought. The court also held that there is no express prohibition in the gravel road act under consideration against the use of patented or copyrighted road building materials in the construction of roads under such act. The court cited statutes regulating county boards and also opinions of courts on road matters.

Judge Pence's finding was eagerly awaited by numerous road builders in Madison county and others, and bond dealers were likewise concerned.

In Madison county there appears to be a fight for business between the Rocmac and cement men. One of the Romac agents in Madison county is Joel Benefiel, who two years ago was auditor of Madison county.

G. C. Blickensderfer Dead.

SOUND BEACH, Conn., August 15.—George C. Blickensderfer, inventor and vice-president of the Blickensderfer Manufacturing Company, died at his home here today. Mr. Blickensderfer since the beginning of the war, invented many devices now in use by makers of munitions and equipment. As a boy he built a flying machine and spent many years in trying to solve the secret of flying. He was born in Erie, Pa., in 1851.
