

Another estate of interest to the people generally, was that of Alfred Graham and his wife, Nellie Eudaly Graham. They lived for many years on what was known as the old Jesse Foulke farm, northwest of Deming. Mr. Graham and also Mrs. Graham had been well known school teachers in the county, living in Wayne township before buying the Foulke farm. They both died and their son died. Ewing Shumack was appointed commissioner to sell the land belonging to Mr. Graham, 102 acres in Jackson township. He recently made the sale to Jesse Whisman, living near Cicero, for $5,500.

Homer Graham died since the proceedings were filed for the sale of the land. The heirs left are Edward R. Graham, living near Columbus, Ohio; Leora Graham, of Tipton; Mrs. Ida B. Waddell, of Wayne township, Mrs. Emma O. Davis, of Anderson; and three daughters, Misses Carrie, Isophene and Imogene, of Noblesville. Newton Wiles, of Cicero, was the administrator of the estate and 40 acres belonging to Mrs. Graham had already been sold, bringing $50 an acre.
