

COUSINS ELOPE.

Pretty Miss Frank Revis and Her Cousin are Missing.

Pretty Miss Frank Revis, daughter of D. W. Revis, a well known farmer living four miles west of Cicero, and her first cousin, whose name is also Revis, eloped last Saturday night. The presumption is that they are married, but nothing has been heard from them since they left.

Last fall Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Revis went to their old home in North Carolina to make an extended visit. Upon their return they were accompanied by two nephews of Mr. Revis, both of whom were young men of good address and pleasing manners. One of them made his home at the Revis residence west of Cicero, and secured employment on the farm of George Foulke near by. Miss Frank Revis is a winsome young lady, a little more than eighteen years of age, and an attachment sprung up between she and her cousin. Their friendship ripened into love and the first intimation that any one had of their prospective marriage was from an inquiry made by the young man who desired to know if there was any state in the union that permitted cousins to marry.

that permitted cousins to marry.

Young Revis, Miss Revis and a relative drove to Olcero last Saturday night to attend a show. When the south-bound train, due here at 9:36 o'clock, passed through that place the young couple bid adieu to their friends, boarded it and left. When the father of the young woman was notified of the elopment he was very angry and made an effort to have the Indianapolis police apprehend them. The only information secured by the capital city authorities concerning them was that a couple answering their description had inquired about the price of tickets to North Carolina. The officers refused to molest the young people until Revis had issued a warrant for their arrest. This action necessarily delayed the matter until next day and by that time the irate father had quieted down and accepted the situation philosophically, agreeing to receive the couple with open arms if they had really been successful in their efforts to marry. It is believed that they are now in North Carolina.
